The Washington MERRY GO ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT ALLEN

SUBCONTRACTOR PROBLEM

Every train to Washington brings a group of small business men with rumpled collars and bulging brief cases. They've heard high officials declare that the defense boom should be evenly distributed. They've read about a subcontracting program for the smaller firms. So they come to town loaded with blueprints and inventories of machine tools.

The visitors wait patiently in defense offices to ask the same question: "When do we get contracts or subcontracts?" Then they go home empty-handed, cursing the "bureaucrats running the defense program."

What they don't know is that the issue of subcontracting is being fought over daily, and with increasing bitterness, at the inner conference tables of the Office of Production Management. The question is whether OPM should crack down on the big primary contractors and force them to farm out their piled-up orders.

The powerful big industry clique says "No." It argues that forced subcontracting would be costly and unreliable. Bob McHenry, a liberal small business man in charge of subcontracting, hotly denies this and is battling to overcome them. The cold facts are that although 200,000 firms are available for defense contracts, 90 per cent of the orders awarded during the last half of 1940 went to 600 large concerns. And 114 of them got 90 per cent of all contracts over $100,000, amounting to $6,686,800,000.

ARMY MORALS

Genial Mark McCloskey, the Federal Security agency's recreation expert, has the soldier's moral lapse figured down to one crucial hour. This hour is the one during which he waits for a bus or train to take him back to camp.

McCloskey, whose job it is to worry about such things and work with the army and navy, has hoped out that if time drags heavily during that hour of waiting the soldier may make for lousy tanks—and who's to blame him?

"The smart thing to do," McCloskey says, "is to brighten up the terminals. Give the boys a place to shoot pool, get some good chow at low prices, and read new magazines. Some pretty waitresses for the boys to kid won't hurt any either."

He doesn't think a tour through the museum of art or a brisk walk so much to combat temptation. Instead he'd like to see every town near a camp organize an honest-to-goodness information bureau for the men.

"If the boys want to go to a dance, get a date, visit with some patriotic family, or see a ball game, the community ought to arrange it for them," contends McCloskey.

He beams when he mentions the 200 miles at the defense plant, a nut factory at Columbus, Ga., who volunteered to act as hostesses for soldiers at dances and social events.

ACTION ON HOUSING

Housing for civilian defense workers, one of the most muddled phases of the defense program, now looks as if it is going somewhere—thanks to the quiet intervention of Mrs. Roosevelt and Frederic A. Delano, uncle of the President and chairman of the national resources planning board.

Both exerted their influence through FDR, himself. The First Lady told him of shoddy housing conditions among defense workers which she had seen in several cities, and warned that there would be serious consequences unless something was done quickly. Delano urged Roosevelt to get behind the C. I. O.'s plan for prefabricated homes.

WILLKIE CAN WEAR SHOES

Much water has gone over the dam since Secretary of the Interior Ickes labeled Wendell Willkie a "barefoot Wall Street lawyer." All is sweetness and light between Willkie and the New Deal—which includes Mr. Ickes—since Wendell's outspoken support of the lend-lease bill.

However, one inquisitive reporter at a recent Ickes press conference wanted to be absolutely sure. "In view of recent developments," he queried, "do you still think Wendell Willkie is a Wall Street barefoot boy?"

Replied Ickes: "I wish anybody has a right to wear shoes in Wall Street in this kind of weather."

Walter Winchell

The Village News Press: (Prop. and Editor, W. Winchell)

The Gov't says you can deduct burglary losses from your taxes. Wendy Barrie wonders if that includes night club overcharges.

Prof. Emory Deutsch, who has been appointed conductor of the CBS Salon orchestra, always did debut playing in night clubs, and never dreamed the day would come again when he could hold his head and fiddle him. Nice boy, Emory. And his pretty bride is a nice girl, too.

Inez Robb of our town spent a quiet week-end over at Mrs. Evelyn McLean's house down Washington way. Mrs. McLean is being the diamond. The first day breakfast was brought to Inez's bedroom, but the second morning it was necessary for Inez to ring. Beside her bed were two buttons. Inez reasoned: "Obviously the black button is for night service; the white one for day." So she touched the white one delicately—and being morning. Well, sir, sirens screamed forth from here, there and everywhere. Great Dances hurried their heads off, and folks started running hither and thither through the halls. Inez, it seems, had rung the fire alarm. Mrs. McLean, the owner, merely turned over in bed. She knew there was a guest. But the coffee—when it did come—was hot.

Ye ed sure got a big laugh out of the story the other day about the 60-year-old president of a Rotary club who ran off with a woman 29 years younger. He can be prosecuted under the Mann act, a federal offense, but what about the Rotary club? Is worried about that. Thermoised his first club luncheon in 18 years!

Enis Byer, the singer and constant subscriber, says ye ed's daily "absolutely concinnishell." Ha, ha.

See where Marshal Petain's allowance for the next three months will be $54,000 francs. That's about $80,000 a year. In other words, Petain gets more to run France than FDR gets to run the U. S. A.

Jean Gabin, the big French actor, told how the Frenchmen feel about Great Britain. He says: "We are both pro and anti-British. Those who are pro-British say each night in their prayers: 'Please, God, let the gallant British win quickly.' Those who are anti-British say in their prayers: 'Please, God, let the awful British win right away.'"

Over at Frank Case's inn the pictures of the drama critics are on display in the lobby. Frank asked Bub Benchley what he thought of them. "The one of George Washington," Bub said, "don't do him injustice."

Guy Lombardo heard a deb say to another: "What color glaucoma are you getting with your new spring suit?"

And Jerry Cooper doesn't believe all that talk about a food shortage in Italy, considering all the crow they have to eat.

Broadway Wiseguy:

He knows the same elements as other people, but in his world they have different functions. . . . The air is something you listen to for songs, sketches, speeches. Walter Winchell says that a smart man is a man who what they put in stocks, and fire is what a poor performance misses. He thinks a skirt isn't a dress, but a woman in one—and when he talks of a turkey he means a dish-dish. He lives and moves in a world of words. . . . Things that are said and done on a stage or screen amuse and touch him, but try to make him weep when the show is over. Try to make him laugh, for that matter. He read it long ago or he heard it when you were still breaking in your longings. . . . People who take "bouts" telling a story (which is a gag in his lingo) are usually bora, phony or jerquus. . . . When he says he doesn't like pictures he means movies, not paintings. . . . A book isn't something to read, but the plot in a musical show, or the thing wagger-makers make for racetrack bet-placers. . . . He is that loud voice giving away the secrets of pals.

He argues that money will buy everything and anything, and he has never learned not to mistake publicity for fame. . . . Most of the United States to him is "the sticks" or "the hinterland." . . . The over 130,000,000 people are "buckers."

Wire and iron bed-springs that become rusty should be given a coat of paint.

Meat should not be seasoned until it is partly cooked.

Mirrors should never be hung where the sun shines directly on them for any length of time.

Put small cooked hamburger cakes between two hot biscuit halves and top them with a brown savory gravy or well seasoned white sauce. You'll like these.

A strong railing to prevent falls and plenty of headroom are two important necessities for any safe cellar stairs. When the steps are in a dark place, several coats of white paint applied to the steps will make for greater safety.

Put your white wash on the sunny side of the line and keep the colored clothing in the shade.

TIPS to Gardeners

CHOOSE BEANS WISELY

THE gardener should be well acquainted with the many available varieties of stringless beans, the is to get the most from his bean crop.

If earliness is the principal interest, the gardener should select either Bountiful (green-podded) or Golden Wonder (yellow). Bountiful is excellent for use when small, in shoe-string size. It is also a good choice for home canning, if it produces abundantly.

The gardener interested in yield for a long season should select both a bush bean, and a pole bean. The pole beans begin producing when the yield from the bush beans begins to wane.

Kentucky Wonder is one of the best all-purpose pole beans. It provides good quality snap beans. When past the snap stage, the pods may be cut up, and cooked southern style. Later, this bean may be used in the green shell stage. In the more mature stage the beans may be used in baking or in soup.

Delicious for healthy appetites—easy to eat, save time and trouble for cooks—economical. Order today, from your grocer.
